DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Nelson Building, until recently occupied by Connor's Pharmacy, is located on the northeast corner of North Commerce Street and Railroad Avenue in Centreville.

The first story of this 2 1/2 story brick Victorian building is used for commercial purposes, while the upper two stories are divided into apartments. For many years the first story was occupied by Connor's Pharmacy. Following the recent liquidation of that business, the space was taken over by an antique/used furniture business.

The store front of the front facade, facing Commerce Street, has been completely renovated in the mid-20th century, leaving only the original bracketed cornice between the first and second story. A door in the north bay of the first story, to the left of the store front, leads up to the second story. Three 1/1 windows are ranged across the second story; the asbestos shingle siding is presumably applied over the original brick facade. A second bracketed cornice is carried across the second story eave below a mansard roof with three pitched-roof 1/1 dormers. Certainly the most

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Constructed in the late 19th or very early 20th century, the brick building known as 102 North Commerce Street combines commercial space on the first floor with apartments on the second and third stories. The first floor was occupied for many years by Connor's Pharmacy and before that by the Sunset Pharmacy. It is primarily significant as an example of Victorian commercial architecture and as an important commercial site in Centreville.

distinguishing feature of this building is a projecting semi-octagonal bay on the southwest corner of the second story. Single 1/1 windows are centered on each of the three principal facets of this projecting bay. The first floor cornice turns the corner and is carried around the base of the bay.

On the south facade, facing Railroad Avenue, there are three small three-light windows placed high up on the first story, three large 1/1 windows on the second story, and three 2/2 pitched roof dormers on the third story. A single door in ^{the} east end of the first story opens into the rear stairhall. The brickwork on this facade remains exposed. It is laid in seven-course bond, painted red. The bracketed second story cornice and mansard roof are carried across this facade.

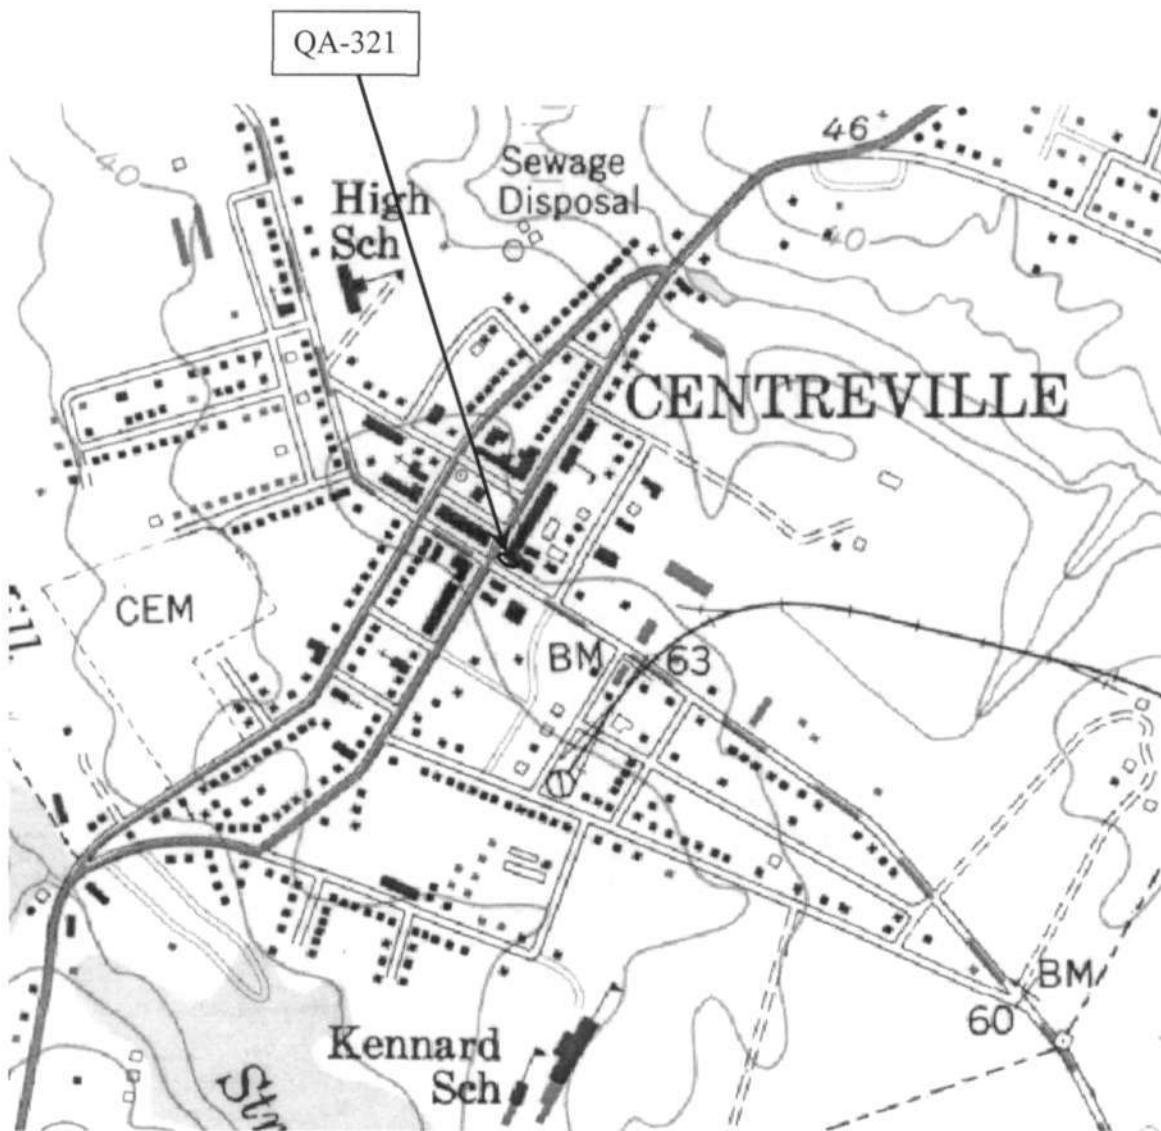

The north facade and most of the rear or east wall are covered by adjacent buildings. The exposed portion of the rear wall is painted white, and a door at the south end of the second story opens onto a porch on the adjoining building.

The first floor interior has been altered over the years, but an original Victorian stair survives in the rear hall, although no longer in use.
